ON EXTRACTION, RELATIONS AND CARE: KNOWLEDGE PRODUCTION IN ARTISTIC-SCIENTIFIC PROCESSES

with Study Group on Relational Ecologies: Andrea Bordoli, Celestina Widmer, Jinat Hossain, Marta Musso, Nicolle Bussien and Riikka Tauriainen

This afternoon, the Study Group on Relational Ecologies will present a screening of four short films, followed by a collective discussion. The programme will reflect on how different approaches to knowledge production influence artistic-scientific work and explore practices of care, collaboration and shared methodologies.

The Study Group emerged from an interest in relational ecologies and the need for sustained, intimate formats of exchange, offering a space where research is shaped through mutual learning and imagination. The group brings together researchers and practitioners focusing on visual anthropology, feminist political ecology, ecofeminist activism, marine science and art.

A workbook developed within a collaborative project on 'Plankton Ecosystems' will also be launched at the event. This documents artistic-scientific processes and invites further engagement.
