SAWMILL PAROZ

The Paroz sawmill is an important witness to the pre-industrial era in the Grand Chasseral. Water splashing, complex cogs linked by leather belts and a waterfall that feeds the paddles of the big wheel allow, in a regular and slow movement, to saw the tree trunks of the surrounding forests. The present building dates from 1785. It was restored and put back into operation in 2014. It is one of the last sawing installations using hydraulic power still functioning.
