COMBE GRÈDE

The Combe Grède is a particularly calm and wild nature reserve. Its almost vertical cliffs are the favorite playground of chamois and marmots. A hike in this reserve is full of surprises. Climbing the Combe Grède from Villeret, you reach the summit of Chasseral with its panoramic view of the three lakes and the Alps. The ascent is enhanced by passages with ladders to climb. Typical of the Grand Chasseral, the farmhouses around the Chasseral await the visitor for a thirst-quenching drink or a regional dish, often cooked with products made on the spot.

GOOD TO KNOW

- The trail will close for the winter on 24 October 2026. Reopening in spring 2027.
- Rockfalls may occur at any time, especially in the section with ladders. It is strongly advised not to stop in this area and to remain particularly alert to any movement or unusual noise.
- At point 912 on the 1:25,000 topographic map, located in the Combe Grède, walkers in groups are advised to follow the Ilsach route to reach Chasseral, as it is more suitable for this type of hikers.
- Vehicles must be parked only in the village square. (Access to the former picnic area is prohibited, and the Combe Grède road is closed to all motorised traffic.)
