NATURAL SITES, BONFOL

PONDS OF BONFOL

“It is not one, not two but three ponds which I discovered on entering this small corner of Ajoie country. I was already familiar with Bonfol and its Pottery Museum but I never knew that it had such a rich natural landscape. These ponds are home to a wide range of different species. I was particularly struck by all the small frogs jumping across the paths, the fish you could make out among the abundant underwater flora and the water lilies as well as the magnificence of Mother Nature herself...”

GOOD TO KNOW

- Explore the Pottery Museum in Bonfol
- Nearby you can also visit the remains of the first few kilometres of the southern part of the Western Front which was occupied by French, German and Swiss soldiers during the First World War.

